

TIGER

the 1990s, the number of people in the world who are under 15 years of age is expected to increase from 1.1 billion to 1.5 billion.

There is a growing awareness of the need to address the needs of children in the 21st century. The United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child (1989) is the first legally binding international instrument to define the rights of children. It has been ratified by 112 countries, including the United Kingdom.

The Convention sets out the rights of children in a number of areas, including the right to life, the right to a family, the right to education, and the right to be heard. It also sets out the responsibilities of parents, families, and society towards children.

The Convention is a landmark document in the history of children's rights. It has inspired many national laws and policies, and it has helped to bring about a more child-friendly world.

The Convention is a testament to the power of international cooperation. It shows that when countries work together, they can make a difference in the lives of children.

The Convention is a call to action. It asks us to think about the rights of children in a new way, and to work together to make sure that every child has the chance to live a full and happy life.

The Convention is a source of inspiration. It reminds us that children are not just the future, they are the present. And we have a responsibility to make sure that they have the best possible start in life.

The Convention is a challenge. It asks us to look at our world through the eyes of a child, and to see the things that we can do to make it a better place for them.

The Convention is a promise. It promises that every child has the right to a better future, and that we have the power to make that promise come true.

The Convention is a dream. It is a dream of a world where every child is valued, where every child has a chance to shine, and where every child is free to be who they are.

The Convention is a hope. It is a hope that we can build a better world for our children, and that we can make a difference in the lives of every child.

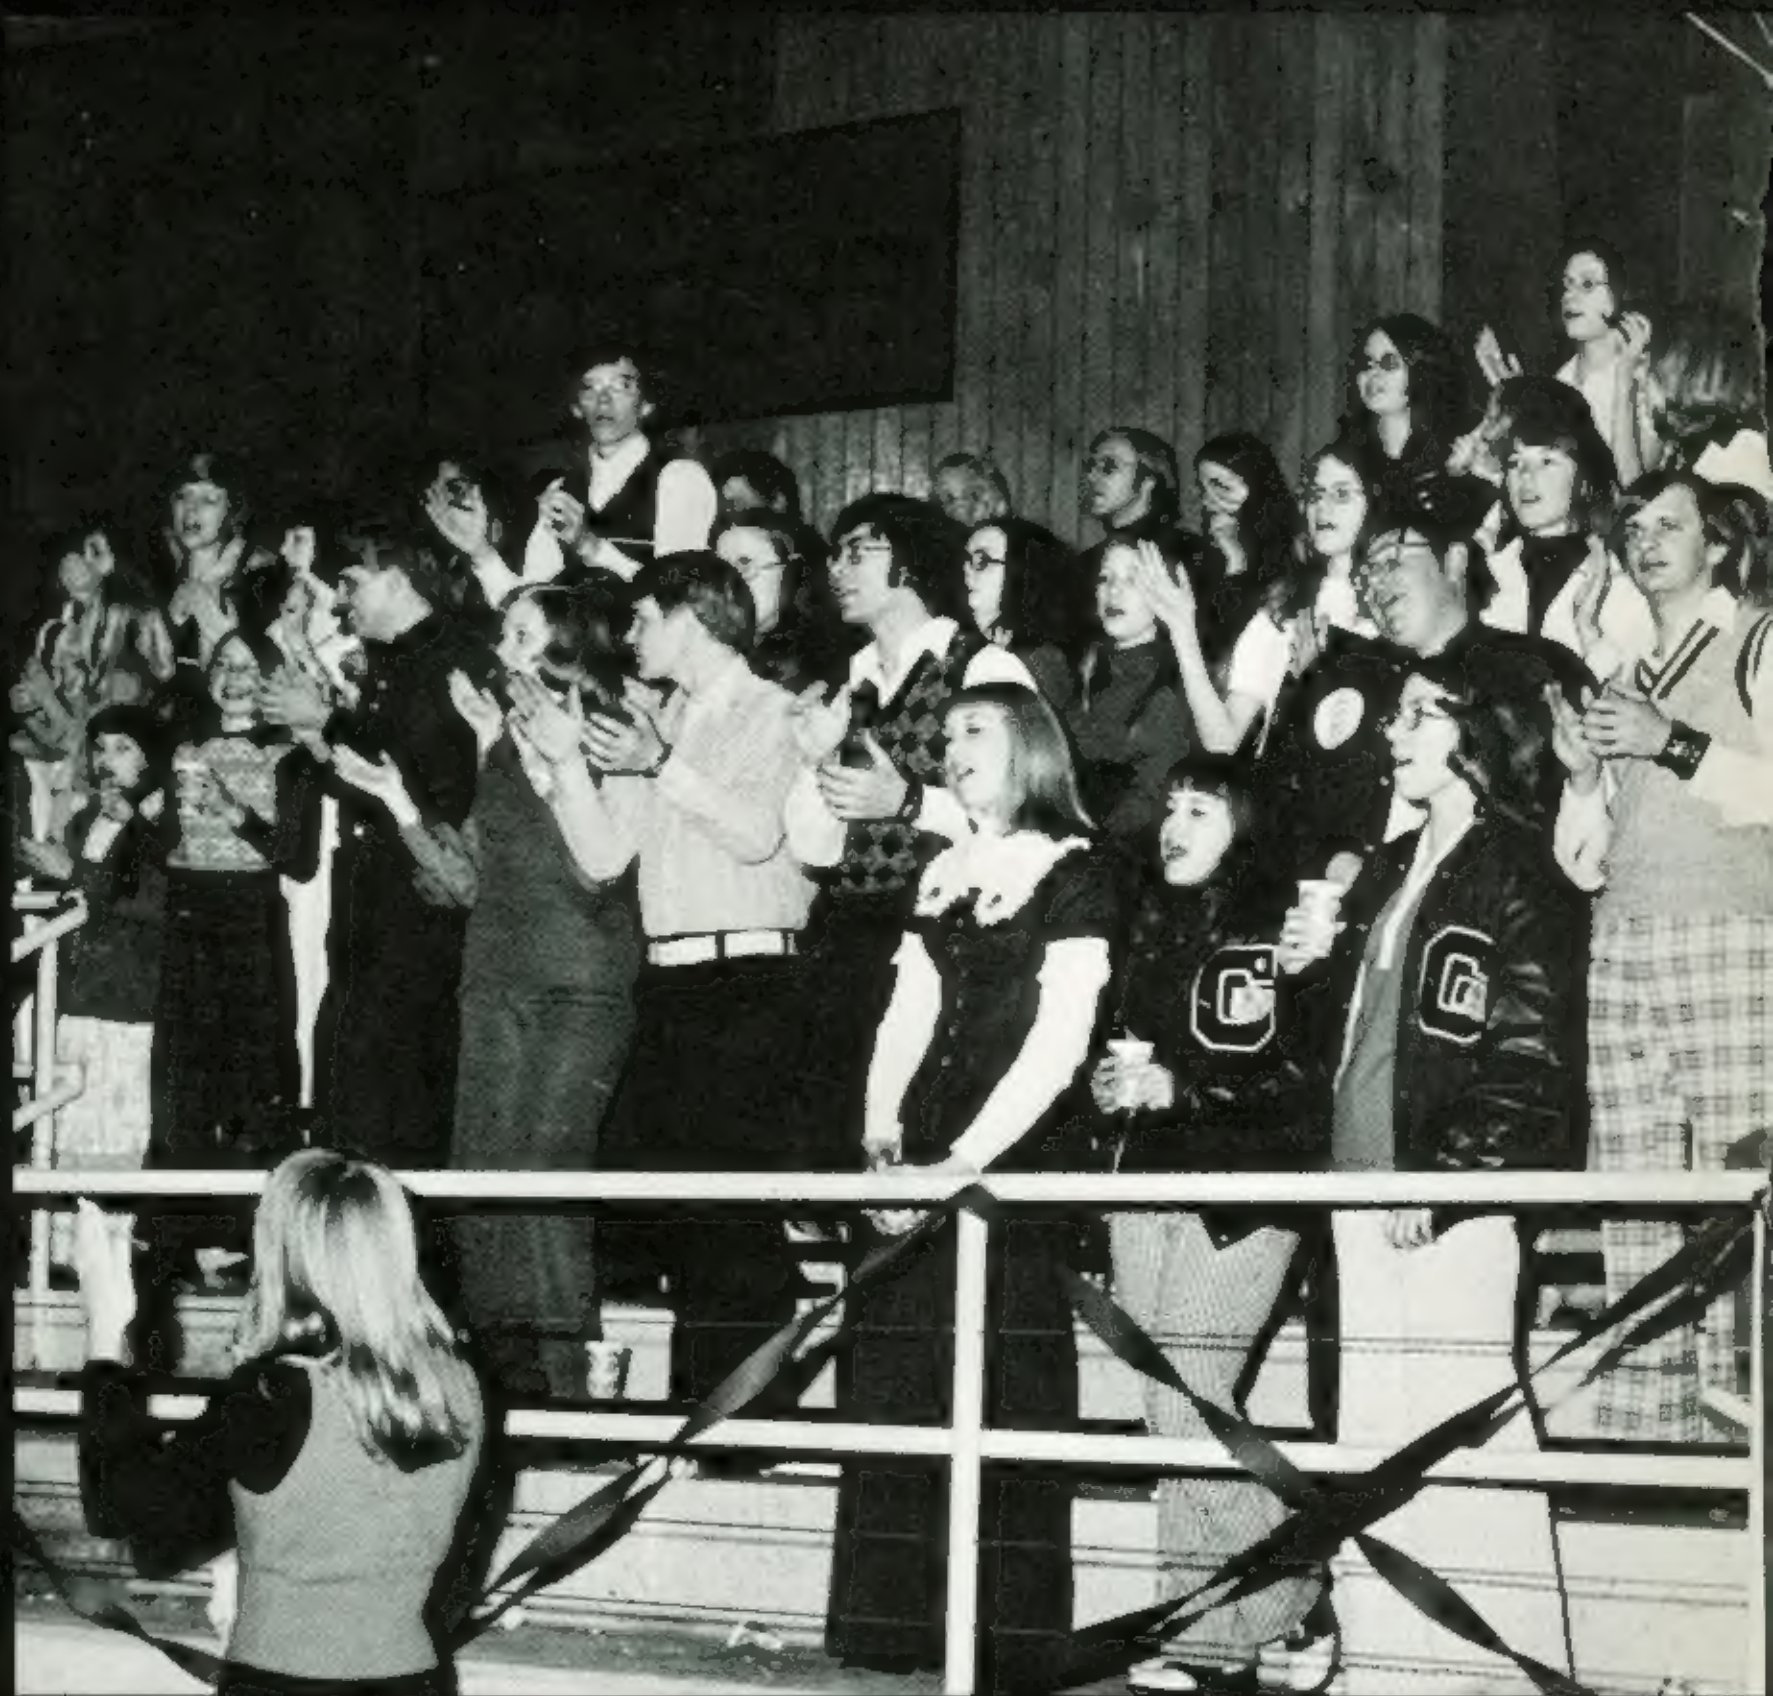

The Convention is a love. It is a love for children, and for the world that they live in. It is a love that gives us the strength to stand up for what is right, and to work together to make a better world for all.

It was a very good year!

Foreword

We, the annual staff of Gage High School, hope that as you look through the 1975 yearbook, it will bring back many memories now and for years to come. We would like to express our appreciation to Mr. Pittman who has spent much time with us in preparing this annual.

Sincerely yours,

Greg Fields

Dedication

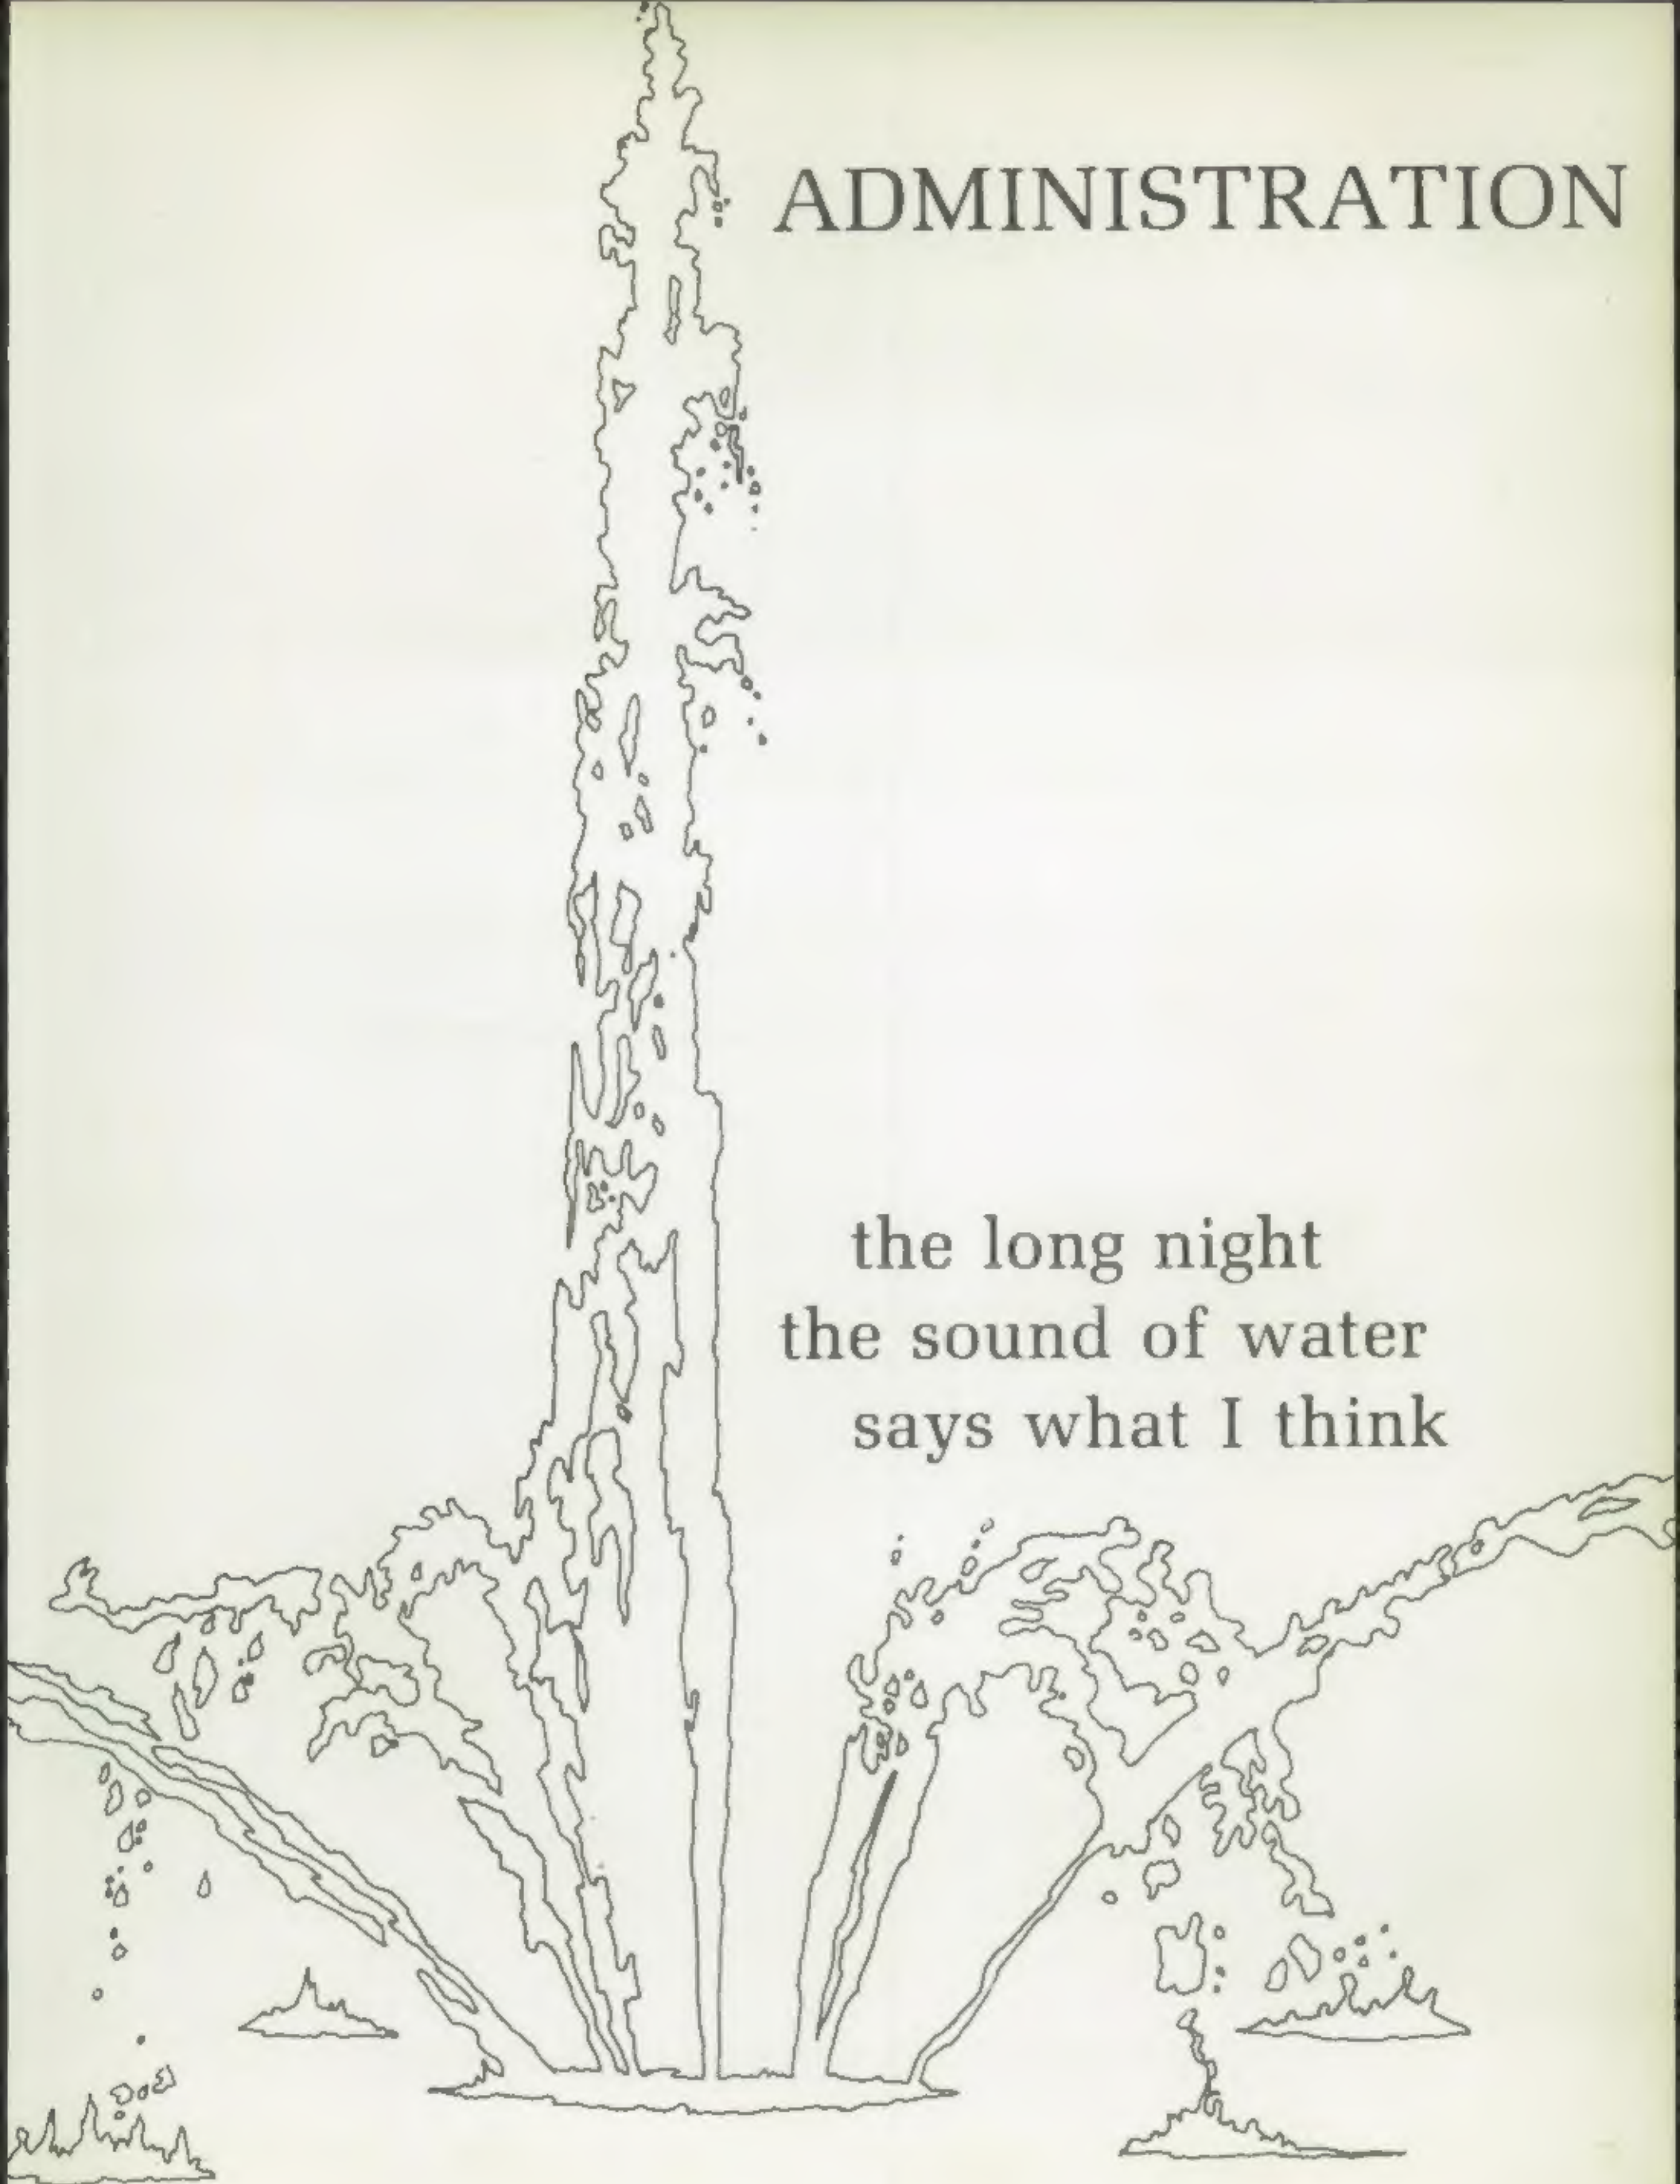

IN MEMORY OF
Ralph Levi Barnes
June 12, 1915 - Aug. 26, 1974

He was born and reared in Gage; he attended school at Gage; all six of his children graduated from Gage High School. Yet he remained for more than twenty-five years devoting his time and affection to the Gage School as timekeeper and scorebook keeper at basketball, volleyball, and baseball games and as a bus driver to games and special activities. We shall miss Ralph Levi Barnes, a friend to each of us.

A line drawing of a lark perched on a rocky outcrop. The lark is facing right, with its head tilted upwards and its beak open as if singing. It has a long, thin tail and a small crest. The rocky outcrop is jagged and uneven, with several vertical lines suggesting cracks or fissures. The background is plain white.

Foreign Exchange Student

To the Tigers:

Hola! Que pasa? For the ones that don't remember me, my name is Lorenzo Arturo Rodriguez Lopez; but everybody calls me "Tule." First of all I want to thank you for what you did for me in the last year. That year that was the greatest one of my life and it was great because you filled it with happiness every minute.

It was a hard year, too, because it is not easy to be away from home, but you always made me feel at home. To find friends in a new town is never easy; but you always were my friends since the very first moment and I still remember you like my dearest friends.

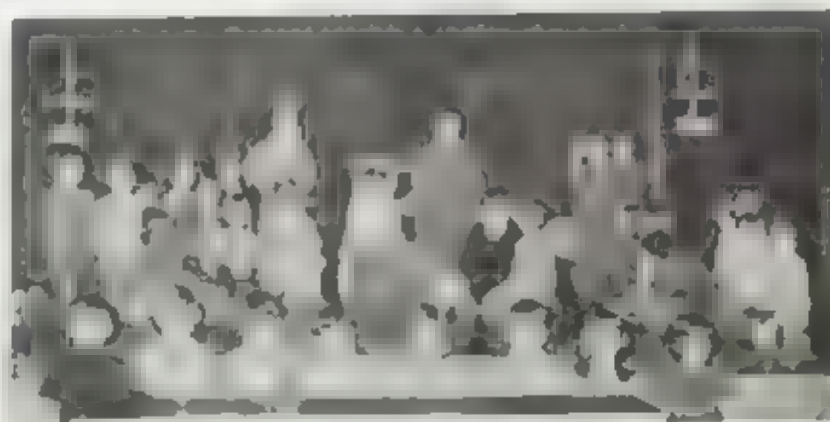

I hope every one of you have some day the opportunity that I had because you have the opportunity to meet other people and to learn a lot of new things. You also learn a new language and have lots of fun.

I will always remember that time that I enjoyed just being around you and I still enjoy when I remember all and every one of those marvelous moments. Thank you and I will see you again some time.
